

I appreciate the great potential that delivering broadband internet service via power lines offers. However, I am concerned by proven communications interference to services already allocated to the frequency spectrum in BPL trials. The commission's foremost concern should be the protection of existing users of the 3 - 30 MHz frequency range. It would be a tragedy for proven emergency communications to be sacrificed for the sake of increased profits for energy utilities tapping into a new market.